

CHBWV employees lend a helping hand

Finished Project

The Department of Energy's prime contractor at the West Valley Demonstration Project, used their day off to "roll up their sleeves" to make a difference in their community. Employees from CH2M HILL BWXT West Valley (CHBWV) helped Springville Youth Incorporated by reconstructing the raised garden and installing concrete parking curbs at their pool and playground area and performed some concrete work. This work was done as part of CHBWV's continued commitment to the community.

On September 24, 12 volunteers performed work at Springville Youth Incorporated to improve the aesthetics of their pool and playground area. A portion of the materials and all landscaping plants for the work were purchased and donated by CHBWV employees and local businesses.

"Today's success speaks volumes to the generosity and kindness of our employees and local businesses," said Lettie Chilson, CHBWV Facility Manager and volunteer coordinator. "It shows the positive impact that kindness can have on a community." "I enjoyed being a part of an event that makes a difference in our community," said Kelly Wooley, CHBWV Deputy General Manager. "I am also grateful that our employees, who work hard all week, would give a day's worth of their free time for such a worthy cause. This clearly demonstrates the commitment our employees have for their community.”

A special thank you to Jake's Greenhouse that supported this event.

The West Valley Demonstration Project is an environmental cleanup and waste management project located about 35 miles south of Buffalo, New York. The project is conducted by the U.S. Department of Energy in cooperation with the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority. CH2M HILL BWXT West Valley, LLC manages and operates the project under contract with DOE. The CHBWV team is comprised of Jacobs, BWX Technologies Services Group and the Environmental Chemical Corporation.
